Jones & Moore Luncheon Building
Cambridge
1920
Private

This two-story, five-bay brick commercial block, built around 1920, repeats the architectural storefront pattern common to Cambridge buildings erected during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Surviving in relatively intact condition, the two-story stretcher and common bond brick blocks dates after a transfer to Brice Goldsborough, A. Shepherd Bayly, George W. Woolford, Winder P. Harrington, William H. Thomas, Howard Bradshaw, and Amil K. Parks. Construction of the two-story commercial block is also confirmed by the Sanborn Insurance maps since the building is not designated on the company map issued in 1918, and its architectural character predates the next map which was issued in 1930. Survivor interests in the property were maintained by heirs named in the 1919 transaction until 1961 when the commercial block and lot were acquired by Hopkins A. and Anona Moore. The building still carries a mid twentieth century Jones & Moore Luncheon sign which is joined with a faded advertisement for Coca-Cola.

DESCRIPTION SUMMARY

The two-story, five-bay commercial block that houses the Jones & Moore Luncheon building is located at 428-432 Race Street in the central business district of Cambridge, Dorchester County, Maryland. Built around 1919, the two-story pressed brick front building stands on the east side of Race Street a few hundred yards north of its intersection with Muir Street. The building faces west.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

Located at 428-432 Race Street, this two-story, five-bay by four-bay brick commercial block stand in the midst of the central business district of Cambridge. Built around 1919, the two-story structure has a pressed brick Race Street elevation, while the southeast side is laid in seven-course common bond. The wall rise to a low parapet, which disguises the shallow slope of the shed roof. A single story brick section extends from the two-story main block, and a single-story concrete block addition has enlarged the building to the east.

The west (main) façade is a five-bay elevation that survives with an intact first floor storefront incorporating three separate sections of differing widths. The two principal storefronts have recessed entrances with large plate glass display windows. Stretching across the full front of the building is an intact pressed metal cornice enriched with a dentiled bed molding and decorative end blocks featuring surface embellishments. The second story is defined by an slightly uneven series of single-pane sash windows fitted with marble sills and segmental jack arches. The wall surface above the windows is defined by two rectangular inset panels framed by a rowlock row that encircles the recessed panels. Trimming the top of the parapet wall is a decorative metal cornice with modillion block eave and an egg-and-dart bed molding. Below the egg-and-dart molding is a frieze of rectangular inset panels. The ends of the cornice, like the storefront cornice, terminate in decorated end blocks featuring molded base and squat finials. Attached to the front of the building between the second and third bays from the north corner is a mid twentieth century sign for the Jones & Moore Luncheon, and hanging below it is a faded Coca-Cola advertisement sign.

The southeast side elevation is laid in seven-course common bond, and the upper wall surface is pierced by an uneven fenestration of single-pane sash windows topped by double rowlock segmental arches. The wall surface rises two full stories and is finished with a terra cotta capped parapet. Piercing the parapet in two locations are single flue stove stacks.

The northeast (rear) wall is defined by a molded brick wall painted white and partially sheltered by a shed roofed porch on the second floor. Segmental arches openings pierce the upper wall surface.

The interior was not open for inspection.
